➤ 2005 Conference – New Zealand

The INQAAHE Biennial conference will be held in the James Cook Hotel (James Cook Hotel), Wellington, New Zealand.

The call for papers has been circulated to all INQAAHE members and is now available on the INQAAHE website at www.inqaah.org or here.. Call for papers

Further information including the launch of the dedicated site and registration details will be finalised over the next couple of weeks and will be advised to the membership as it becomes available.

- The INQAAHE board is pleased to announce that the network has accepted the invitation from the Commission for Academic Accreditation (CAA) of the United Arab Emirates, to co-sponsor a conference on quality assurance and e-learning. The conference that is being organised by the UAE Ministry of Higher Education (the sponsor of the CAA) and the Higher Colleges of Technology, builds on two previous conferences on e-learning that had been held in the last two years.

The conference will take place in September and further information will be advised to members when it becomes available.

- Issue 24 of the QA Newsletter has been circulated to all members and is now available to download in pdf format from the publications section of the INQAAHE website at QA Newsletters or directly by clicking here QA Issue 24.

The Board of INQAAHE have agreed to the proposal by the publishers, the Hong Kong Council for Academic Accreditation, that this and future issues be published in electronic format only. In putting forward the proposal HKCAA considered the cost, efficiency and scope of distribution.

If you have any comments on the newsletter or bulletins, or any items you would like included in future bulletins to be circulated by INQAAHE please contact Ann Graves at inqaah@hetac.ie

General Information

- The European Consortium for Accreditation in Higher Education (ECA) is pleased to announce its website: www.eaconsortium.net If you have any suggestions for improvement or questions please contact Mark Fredericks, ECA Coordinator at m.frederiks@nvaio.net
- The South African Council on Higher Education has withdrawn accreditation from ten of the country's 28 MBA programmes. Most of the programmes are in small private institutions but large public institutions such as the University of Natal have also lost their accreditation. Further information available on the CHE website at <http://www.che.org.za>
- The Council for Higher Education and Accreditation (CHEA) has expressed "concern and alarm" over a major bill on higher education (HR 4283) in accreditation. While the provisions of the bill would enact provisions that would strengthen accountability in ways advocated by CHEA it would also authorise major governmental inclusion in matters of academic quality.

The provisions of the bill include the following requirements:

Accreditors would have to produce a public summary of their actions and findings when accreditation status is granted or renewed.

Institutions would need to state the learning objectives for their programmes.

Accreditors would be required to demonstrate to federal officials that the quality of distance learning in the institutions they accredit is comparable to face to face provision.

- The Malaysian announced in April that in future that applications to offer franchised programmes from foreign universities in Malaysia will normally only be approved if the foreign university is sufficiently highly ranked in national league tables. For example, in the case of the United Kingdom, the university must be ranked in the top 60 by the Times Good University Guide, Financial Times or Daily Telegraph. In the United States, the Malaysian government will rely on publications such as Peterson's US Colleges & University Handbook.
