FOSTERING EXCELLENCE IN HIGHER EDUCATION THROUGH EFFECTIVE INTERNAL AND EXTERNAL QUALITY ASSURANCE SYSTEMS: BEST PRACTICES, CRITICAL SUCCESS FACTORS, CHALLENGES AND OPPORTUNITIES IN THE SADC REGION

In today's rapidly evolving global landscape, the quality of higher education is crucial for national development, economic competitiveness, and social justice within the Southern African Development Community (SADC) region. As higher education institutions (HEIs) grapple with increasing pressures to meet diverse stakeholder expectations, adapt to technological advancements, and address shifting labour market demands, effective quality assurance (QA) systems have become essential. This concept note outlines the need for a regional conference focused on strengthening these systems, highlighting best practices, critical success factors, enablers, challenges, and opportunities specific to the SADC region. The conference aims to foster collaboration and promote excellence in higher education across the region.

3. Rationale

A regional conference on fostering excellence in higher education through effective internal and external quality assurance systems is essential for several reasons:

- Addressing common challenges: HEIs in the SADC region often face similar challenges related to QA, such as limited resources, staff resistance, data quality issues, bureaucratic processes, a lack of expertise, and the need to align with international standards. A regional conference provides a platform to share experiences, discuss common problems, and develop collective, context-specific solutions.
- Sharing best practices: The conference will facilitate the exchange of best practices in internal and external QA, enabling institutions to learn from successful models and adapt them to their specific contexts. This includes sharing effective strategies for institutional self-assessment, program review, student feedback mechanisms, faculty development, curriculum development, accreditation, and external evaluation.

- Promoting harmonization and standardization: A regional conference can contribute to the harmonization of QA standards and practices across the SADC region, promoting greater comparability and recognition of qualifications. This is particularly important for facilitating student and staff mobility, cross-border education, and regional integration within SADC.
- Building capacity: The conference will provide opportunities for capacity building and professional development for QA professionals, institutional leaders, faculty members, and other stakeholders. Workshops, seminars, and training sessions can enhance participants' knowledge and skills in designing, implementing, and evaluating QA systems.
- Fostering collaboration and networking: The conference will bring together key stakeholders from across the SADC region, including policymakers, QA agencies, HEI leaders, faculty, students, and industry representatives. This will foster collaboration, networking, and the development of partnerships to support QA initiatives.
- Raising awareness and advocacy: The conference will raise awareness of the importance of QA in higher education and advocate for policies and resources that support its effective implementation. This includes promoting a culture of quality, continuous improvement, and stakeholder engagement.
- Responding to global trends: The conference will address emerging trends and challenges in higher education, such as the increasing use of technology, the rise of online learning, the need for competency-based education, and the importance of internationalization. It will explore how QA systems can adapt to these trends and ensure the quality and relevance of higher education in the 21st century.
- Alignment with regional priorities: Improving the quality of higher education is a key priority for the SADC region. A conference on this topic will contribute to the broader regional agenda of enhancing the competitiveness and relevance of higher education, aligning with regional priorities for socio-economic development.

Join us in shaping the future of higher education in the SADC region as this conference offers a unique opportunity to engage with thought leaders, share transformative ideas, and co-create actionable solutions that will elevate quality assurance practices and foster excellence across institutions. Be part of the movement driving sustainable, inclusive, and globally competitive higher education.
